Learn what she learned—practical tips to help you find and preserve your family story, including:

- People sources—interviewing advice
- Paper sources—searching off the beaten track
- What to do with all this once you find it
